Federal Student Aid  Income-Driven Repayment Plans for Federal Student Loans

What is an income-driven repayment plan?

An income-driven repayment plan is a repayment plan that sets your monthly student loan payment at an amount that is intended to be affordable based on your income and family size. The U.S. Department of Education offers three income-driven repayment plans: Income-Based Repayment Plan (IBR Plan), Pay As You Earn Repayment Plan (Pay As You Earn Plan), and Income-Contingent Repayment Plan (ICR Plan). Most federal student loans are eligible for at least one income-driven repayment plan.

How are monthly payment amounts determined under income-driven repayment plans?

The chart below shows how payment amounts are determined under each income-driven plan. Depending on your income and family size, you may have no monthly payment at all. You can estimate your payments under these plans using the Repayment Estimator at StudentAid.gov/repayment-estimator.

| Income-Driven Repayment Plan | Payment Amount |
| IBR Plan for those who are not new borrowers* on or after July 1, 2014 | Generally 15 percent of your discretionary income, but never more than  the 10-year Standard Repayment Plan amount |
| IBR Plan for those who are new borrowers* on or after July 1, 2014 | Generally 10 percent of your discretionary income, but never more than  the 10-year Standard Repayment Plan amount |
| Pay As You Earn Plan | Generally 10 percent of your discretionary income, but never more than  the 10-year Standard Repayment Plan amount |
| ICR Plan | The lesser of the following:  20 percent of your discretionary income or  what you would pay on a repayment plan with a fixed payment over the  course of 12 years, adjusted according to your income |

*For IBR, you are a new borrower if you had no outstanding balance on a William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan (Direct Loan) Program loan or Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) Program loan when you received a Direct Loan on or after July 1, 2014.

Sample Payment Amounts

The table below provides examples of monthly and total payment amounts under the IBR, Pay As You Earn, and ICR plans for a borrower who is single and in a one-person household; has an annual income of $$ 40,000$; and resides in one of the 48 contiguous states. These figures are estimates based on an interest rate of $8.25 \%$, the current maximum interest rate for undergraduate borrowers. Various factors, including your actual interest rate, the amount of your loan debt and income, and whether and how quickly your income increases may cause your payment amount to differ from the amounts shown in these tables. These figures assume that income increases 5 percent per year and use the 2014 Poverty Guidelines (published by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services) and Income Percentage Factors (from the U.S. Department of Education).

How long will I be in repayment under each plan?

Income-driven repayment plans have different repayment periods (see the chart below). Under all three plans, any remaining loan balance is forgiven if your federal student loans are not repaid in full at the end of the repayment period. For any income-driven repayment plan, the repayment period includes periods of economic hardship deferment and periods of repayment under certain other repayment plans. Whether you ultimately have a balance left to be forgiven at the end of your repayment period depends on a number of factors, such as how quickly your income rises and how large your income is relative to your debt. Because of these factors, you may fully repay your loan prior to the end of your repayment period.

| Repayment Plan | Repayment  Period |
| :--- | :--- |
| IBR Plan for those who are not new borrowers on or after  July 1, 2014 | 25 years |
| IBR Plan for new borrowers on or after July 1, 2014 | 20 years |
| Pay As You Earn Plan | 20 years |
| ICR Plan | 25 years |

Note: If you're paying under an income-driven repayment plan and are eligible for Public Service Loan Forgiveness, you may qualify for forgiveness of any remaining Direct Loan balance after you have made 10 years of qualifying payments. Visit

Who is eligible for income-driven repayment?

IBR and Pay As You Earn Plans

Both of these plans have an eligibility requirement you must meet before you can enter the plan. In order for you to qualify, the payment that you would be required to make under the IBR or Pay As You Earn plan (based on your income and family size) must be less than what you would pay under the Standard Repayment Plan with a 10-year repayment period. Generally, you will meet this requirement if your federal student loan debt is higher than your annual discretionary income or represents a significant portion of your annual discretionary income.

There is an additional qualification requirement for the Pay As You Earn Plan. For Pay As You Earn, you also must be a new borrower as of Oct. 1, 2007, and must have received a disbursement of a Direct Loan on or after Oct. 1, 2011. You are a new borrower if you had no outstanding balance on a Direct Loan or FFEL Program loan when you received a Direct Loan or FFEL Program loan on or after Oct. 1, 2007.

ICR Plan

The ICR Plan does not have an initial income eligibility requirement. Any borrower with eligible federal student loans may make payments under this plan.

Will I always pay the same amount each month under an income-driven repayment plan?

IBR and Pay As You Earn Plans

When you enter the IBR or Pay As You Earn Plan, your monthly payment will be based on your income and family size. You must provide your loan servicer with updated income and family size information each year. Your required monthly payment amount may increase or decrease if your income or family size changes from year to year.

If the payment amount based on your income and family size ever increases to the point that it is higher than the amount you would have to pay under the 10-year Standard Repayment Plan, your payment will no longer be based on your income and family size. Instead, your payment will be the amount you would have had to pay under the 10-year Standard Repayment Plan. This amount will be determined based on the loan amount you owed when you first entered the IBR or Pay As You Earn plan

ICR Plan

Under the ICR Plan, your payment is always based on your income and family size but will usually be higher than payments under the IBR and Pay As You Earn plans, and in some cases could be higher than the amount you would pay under the 10-year Standard Repayment Plan.

What types of federal student loans are eligible to be repaid under an income-driven repayment plan?

*If a loan type is listed as "Eligible if consolidated," this means that if you consolidate that loan type into a Direct Consolidation Loan, you can then repay the consolidation loan under the income-driven plan.
Note that only federal student loans can be repaid under the income-driven plans. Private student loans are not eligible.

What are the pros and cons of repaying my loan under an income-driven plan?

Income-driven repayment plans may lower your federal student loan payments. However, whenever you make lower payments or extend your repayment period, you will likely pay more in interest over time-sometimes significantly more. In addition, under current Internal Revenue Service (IRS) rules, you may have to pay income tax on any amount that is forgiven if you still have a remaining balance at the end of your repayment period for an income-driven repayment plan.

How do I apply for an income-driven plan?

Before you apply for an income-driven repayment plan, contact your loan servicer if you have any questions. Your loan servicer will help you decide whether one of these plans is right for you.

To apply, you must submit an application called the Income-Driven Repayment Plan Request. You can submit the application online at StudentLoans.gov or on a paper form, which you can obtain from your loan servicer. Along with the application, you will be asked to provide income information. You can document your income using your adjusted gross income (AGI) if (1) you have filed a federal income tax return in the past two years and (2) the income on your most recent federal income tax return is not significantly different from your current income. If you do not meet these conditions for documenting your income using AGI, you must provide alternative documentation of income.
You can provide your AGI in one of the following ways:

- Apply using the online Income-Driven Repayment Plan Request and use the IRS Data Retrieval Tool in the application to transfer income information from your most recent federal income tax return.
- Use the paper Income-Driven Repayment Plan Request and provide a paper copy of your most recently filed federal income tax return or IRS tax return transcript.

You can provide alternative documentation of income in one of the following ways:

- If you currently receive taxable income, you must submit a paper Income-Driven Repayment Plan Request with alternative documentation of your income, such as a pay stub.
- If you do not currently have income or if you receive only untaxed income, you can indicate as much on the online or paper application. You are not required to supply further documentation of your income.
